Dear Coreline Burggraaff:

It is with great pleasure that we inform you of being selected as a recipient of the Alavi–Mandell Award for your publication entitled, “Interobserver agreement of interim and end-of-treatment ¹⁸F-FDG PET/CT in diffuse large B-cell lymphoma (DLBCL): impact on clinical practice and trials.”

As you may know, our families established the award to honor our fathers, who valued education immensely. Unfortunately, they did not have an opportunity to reach their potential to become physician scientists. The award is given to individuals who were the first author of a paper published in the JNM, were trainees at the time the published work was carried out and made a major contribution to the completion of the work. The award is accompanied by a monetary reward of $150, which is provided by the established fund.

Our aim is to encourage young physicians and scientists to pursue a career in academic and research in nuclear medicine.

Best wishes for a very successful and fulfilling research career.

Sincerely,

Abass Alavi, MD

Gerald Mandell, MD
